

HHMI-Funded 2008 Undergraduate Summer Internship In Bionanotechnology

Application Deadline is February 15, 2008

“We are not students of some subject matter, but students of problems. And the problems may cut right across the borders of any subject matter or discipline.” - Karl Popper

2008 Undergraduate Summer Internship in Bionanotechnology

The Institute of Biosciences and Bioengineering at Rice University hosts the nationwide HHMI-funded undergraduate summer internship program in Bionanotechnology.

Applications are now being accepted for summer 2008.

This summer program features:

- An intensive biology lecture and laboratory course teaching cell culture, basic molecular biology, and protein biochemistry,
- Cutting-edge research in bionanotechnology,
- Special seminars and career development workshops,
- Competitive stipends and up to $500 in travel support, and
- On-campus housing.

We hope that you will join us in the discovery of Bionanotechnology!
